

Dr Jon Walton MBChB MRCP FRCA DipICM FFICM

Lead Consultant in Intensive Care Medicine

Freeman Hospital ICU,

Newcastle upon Tyne.

Jon attended Sheffield University Medical School, qualifying in 1994 and has since worked in Sheffield, Birmingham, Swansea, London, Bristol and The University of Michigan.

He eventually ended up carving out a career in ICM after testing out emergency medicine, general medicine and cardiology.

After finishing his registrar training in Bristol, he successfully navigated a locum position at the Freeman Hospital becoming a substantive consultant in 2007.

He has been Clinical Lead Consultant for the Freeman ICU since January 2018.

His medical interests include hypoxaemic rescue, hyperammonaemic coma, holistic ICU care and a dedication to eradicating the use of the term 'lactic acidosis' in general parlance.

His non-medical interests include playing bass guitar in the shambolic rock group 'Spelk' and is a keen fair weather cyclist.
